The third in the series of Pokémon Kaizo games, and just as difficult as any other.Pokémon Emerald Kaizo is a super-hard mode ROM hack of Pokémon Emerald and the official sequel of Pokemon Blue Kaizo & Pokemon Crystal Kaizo . These titles were inspired by Kaizo Mario World, though the game's difficulty was inspired by Drayano60's Firedred Omega, as well as Pokémon Stadium. Just like Blue Kaizo & Crystal Kaizo, just about everything in the game, including the wild Pokémon, the teams of trainers and gym leaders, and even the layouts, has been changed to make the game a much more difficult experience than vanilla Emerald. It is authored by SinisterHoodedFigure.The game can be found here.Tropes used in Pokémon Emerald Kaizo: 100% Completion: You can obtain all 386 Pokémon in the game, although just like in vanilla Emerald, some are reserved for the post game only, such as Groudon, Kyogre, Rayquaza, and more, after meeting certain criteria. Usually by the Sootopolis City gym, you'll have seen 330+ Pokémon, and by the time you reach the Elite Four in Ever Grande City, assuming you haven't missed any Pokémon Trainer battles (in most routes, nigh impossible due to Kaizo), you'll have maybe 10 Pokémon remaining (376/386), all of them special legends. Unlike Blue Kaizo or Crystal Kaizo, you most likely will have to play in the post-game to see & have a chance to encounter all 386 Pokémon. Certain Legendary Pokémon can be obtained in Emerald Kaizo by trading one of those exclusive Pokémon. As for the roaming Legends (such as Latios & Latias & a few others), all of them are level 100, which in theory, should not be an issue in post game since by then, you should have a team that can easily handle them. Action Bomb: Subverted, to a certain degree. Fortunately, it's not as common as it is in Crystal Kaizo or Blue Kaizo. Sure, Pokémon that know Explosion or Self-Destruct do exist in the game (Electrode, Golem, and in the late game, Wailord), but it's usually not a common sight in enemy team/encounters. Adaptational Badass: One of the signature changes in Crystal & Blue Kaizo, and Emerald Kaizo doesn't disappoint as well. Even the very first Pokémon you'll encounter, a level 2 Zigzagoon, was given a significant buff with a more competitive moveset. Bonus Boss: The Gym Leaders have boss rematch fights, but when searching for Groudon and Kyogre, there is one boss fight before them that you must engage in. Boring, but Practical: Lanturn, solid bulk, great typing, available as soon as you step into Slateport City, and the only Pokémon in the game with Volt Absorb. The enemy AI would have their check for Volt Absorb reset every time it's switched out, making it able to repeatedly heal itself by switching into Electric-type attacks. Boss in Mook's Clothing: Some Magma or Aqua Grunts can engage in surprisingly difficult double battles, and the Cooltrainers and Experts are often comparable to bosses. Winstrate Vito is the last obstacle in Victory Road, and is much stronger than the previous trainers. The Cameo: Pokémon Trainer Red is fought three times in the main game, and once in the Trick House. He uses a pre-evolved forms of his 2nd and 4th battle team. The third time, he uses powerful Legends and pseudo-legendaries. Damage Over Time: The Stall Room uses Toxic, Spikes, and Sandstorm. Some trainers in the Victory Road use that as well. The Dreaded: Intimidate users, including new users such as Galie, Pinsir, Houndoom, and Tyrantitar. Dual Boss: Tate and Liza both have Latios and Latias in their boss fight. Maxie and Tabitha battle together. Sootopolis Gym has two Gym Leaders. You only battle them one at a time, but the first one is a single battle, while the other is a double-battle. Elemental Absorption: Volt Absorb and Water Absorb, available on the Chinchou line and Wooper line respectively. Elite Mooks: Gym Trainers, Cooltrainers, and the Experts have high quality, full teams, with strategies or cores. Fragile Speedster: The speed room has very fast Pokémon Glass Cannon: Half of Sydney's team consists of this, among two Mighty Glaciers and a Lightning Bruiser. Hostile Weather: The Weather Teams are very threatening. Lavaridge Gym, Sootopolis Gym, Magma Hideout, and Seafloor Cavern have permanent sun and permanent rain. Lethal Lava Land: Magma Hideout. In addition to lava, the dungeon has permanent sunlight and heat, and the Magma grunts have full teams of sun abusers, in addition to exploders, status users, and setup. This is regarded as one of the hardest dungeons in Emerald Kaizo. Lightning Bruiser: The bulky swift swimmers such as Swampert, Ludicolo, Kingdra, and Dewgong. Mana Burn. Pheobe upgrades this with Double Teaming ghosts with presure, and recovery moves. The Maze: Most of the dungeons in the game have large mazes and puzzles to navigate through. The post-game Trick hHouse has a several rooms full of mazes to navigate. Mighty Glacier: Wailord, Dusclops, and Sableye are buffed in that regard. They hit hard, they take multiple hits, but are very slow. Glacia has bulky Wailord, Lapras, and a literal example with Regice. Monster Whale: Wailord is notably buffed, and a formidable Pokémon. Its stats are on par with Snorlax, with the lowest speed in the game, and with a powerful buffed Water Spout and Self-destruct attack. Ninja: The Ninja Boy, who utilizes fast Pokémon, status inflictions, or evasion abuse. They hide in the overworld. Our Dragons Are Different: The Dragon Tamer in the Fortree Gym, and Drake in the Elite 4 have powerful Dragon Types, but also some dragonlike Pokemon. Right-Hand Attack Dog: Team Magma often uses dog Pokémon, notable ones being Houndoom, Arcanine, Manectric, Granbull, and Smeargle. Status Ailment: Many trainers, but Pheobe is a notable abuser of sleep and paralysis moves. Status Buff: Drake uses Dragon Dance to buff his attack and speed, while using Calm Mind to buff his dangerous Soul Dew Latias. Slippy-Slidey Ice World: In addition to Shoal Cave, two more dungeons have some very difficult ice puzzles to navigate: Granite Cave, and Seafloor Cavern. Sometimes if you make a mistake, you have to start back at the very beginning. The mist makes some parts more difficult.
